The Organizing Committee of the First International Congress of Tobacco Research invites you to participate in the first edition, which will be held in Havana, Cuba, December 9-13, 2019. Research and innovation - oriented contributions that show opportunities for the continuous improvement of processes associated to the tobacco network, that help for perfecting its understanding from science and allow an adequate response to the climate change, the regulatory environment and the consumers' demands will be preferably accepted. The widest possible scope within the specific area of knowledge in which they develop is further desired. Experiences dealing with social, historical, cultural and marketing perspectives, treated with a scientific and/or innovative approach, which show novelty and efficiency in the positioning of tobacco and its related products in the market will be also welcome. The Congress will include a day visit to the "Estación Experimental del Tabaco" in "San Juan y Martínez", located in the Vuelta Abajo region. Founded in 1937, this was the first scientific institution in Cuba dedicated to tobacco research and the second one committed to agricultural researches. There will be a workshop with the Cuba's leading tobacco growers and several Habano man in the same place.

The specific topics of the Congress are the following:

I. Plant breeding and pathology. Conservation of the Germplasm Collection: Management and conservation of Nicotiana species. Sources of resistance in Tobacco. Resistant cultivars. Integrated pest management. Leaf integrity. Plant-pathogen interaction. Biotechnology.

II. Agricultural Practices and Plant Physiology: Soil management. Good Agricultural Practices. Phytotechnics. Environmentally friendly production alternatives. Challenges associated to the climate change. Forestry studies. Authenticity of the Cuban tobacco Appellations of origin.

III. Tobacco pre-processing: curing, sorting and classification, stripping, and storing: Design of curing barns and curing programs. Optimization of the methods for sorting. Classification and stripping. Fermentation efficiency. Systems for packaging and baling. Moisture handling. Chemical changes during pre-processing.

IV. Industrial processing of conventional (combustible) and the emergent products. Utilization of tobacco different from smoking.

Characterization of the raw materials. Product development and optimization. Quality control. Aging and shelf life of raw materials and products. Post-harvest tobacco infestation control. Analytical procedures applied for tobacco and its smoke. Tobacco and health. Tobacco as a scientific tool. Tobacco utilization different from smoking.

V. Scientific approach about social, historical, cultural and marketing aspects of tobacco and related products: History of the tobacco science and the agro-industry. Managing of the scientific information. Tobacco culture and artistry. Tobacco in gastronomy and services. Trends in the marketing, acceptance and consumption of tobacco.
